The magazine you are holding may be the most difficult April issue we have produced in our publication's history. Fortunately, this has nothing to do illness, family emergencies, or technology crashing. The reason can be found on our ankles. We are both sporting a golfer's tan. In the past, the lag between the Chicago Golf Show and our April issue involved braving three-season weather potential on the course, so office time was never really compromised. However, Summer 2012 came two months early, so we found ourselves wearing shorts and sneaking out to the course. For a week and a half stretch, Chicagoland had warmer temperatures than Southern California and Phoenix. Our catch phrase for that warm spell was "destination Chicago." Sunscreen in March is a beautiful thing.

With fuel prices threatening to surpass the cost of a price of a small bucket of golf balls, "destination Chicago" may be where many families spend their summer vacations. We have it better than most, though. If you are looking for the best public golf in the country—it is here! Simply toss a dart at a road map of Northern Illinois and you'll be near a quality course. Even if your aim is a little off, it is a short drive to premier destinations in Wisconsin, Michigan, and Indiana. Beginning in our June issue, we will provide suggestions for stay-cations with activities for the entire family.

On a final note, this month's feature is a bit of a pipe dream for most of us. Shooting Star Golf Club in Jackson, Wyoming, is a private club that most of our readers will never get a chance to play, but we know that golfers love to see what is out there, which is why Augusta National always ranks as our country's favorite course. Just because 99.9% of golfers will never play it doesn't mean we cannot appreciate the course. We hope you enjoy our feature/photo essay on Shooting Star. If you make the right wish on a heavenly body sliding across the sky...you may find yourself at the base of the Teton Mountains with a 7-iron in your hand.

Zoom Zoom

Step for step, round to round, Nike's Zoom Advance could be the most comfortable golf shoe on the market. The Zoom cushioning system is ideal for walkers and 36-hole-a-day fanatics. Gone are the days of ripping off your golf shoes to let your dogs breathe; this shoe is geared for all-day comfort.

Nike's Power Platform sole is decidedly performance-driven. Whether you are facing a billy goat lie, or hoping to get home in two from a moist fairway, Zoom Advance will provide the stability, balance, and traction to ensure a confident swing.

With a full-grain leather upper by Sadesa® and a two-year waterproof warranty, durability, performance, and style are unmatched with the Zoom Advance.

Long Just Got Longer

The super-ultra-light XCG5, Tour Edge's latest addition to their Exotics' big stick collection, is long, but more importantly, it is straight. With a 26-gram Winn grip, 40-gram Tour AD shaft, and a 271-gram clubhead, players can achieve their maximum clubhead speed. Moreover, if your ball flight tends to veer right, the super-light weight will help you square the face at impact.

Don't let the price scare you from testing this elite driver. Exotics remains the only driver sold in America that applies combo brazing, an expensive welding process, to its clubs. If you want to go long, and straighter, from the tee box, then swing the super-ultra-light XCG-5.

Crisp Contact

Metal-X™, the latest addition to the Odyssey® putter line, offers an innovative face that presents auditory feedback and a pure roll. The putter face is layered with a lightweight aluminum face on a urethane insert. This combination provides a crisp sound, and that sound is a key element of the 'feel' that golfers experience at impact. Innovation does not stop with the putter face's materials. The face has oval depressions to increase topspin and reduces skidding. The face pattern creates more friction, and due to fewer contact points, enhances the auditory experience. Pair Odyssey's innovative face technologies with the sleek black putter head and you have a short stick that will stalk the cup like a panther.

No Sweat

The American-made TERVIS® brand has a cult-like following. Much like New Balance shoes, Subaru cars, and Tilley hats, once you try 'em, you are hooked for life.

TERVIS® insulated drinkware keeps cold drinks cold and hot drinks hot. Tervis® products also reduce, if not eliminate, condensation that is inevitable during the summer months. Cleverly, the company calls this feature Table Ring Armor. These products are not only green; they could make you drink coasters obsolete.

The TERVIS® BOTTLED IT is an ideal water bottle for the course. It fits in most golf car cup holders and it will slide into most carry bag beverage pockets. The 24 oz. Bottle is dishwasher and freezer safe, so maintenance is a breeze. Each bottle, like all TERVIS® products, has a lifetime guarantee. This is a bottle that could outlast your relationship with your putter, your job, or even your playing partners.

Trolley Ready

As we all try to be a little greener on the course, we see more and more golfers are pushing performance carts in lieu of renting a golf car for 18 holes. If you are among the ranks that push a trolley, then you have experienced the difficulties a stand bag presents. Sun Mountain answers that problem with the Sync golf bag. Designed for speed and push carts, Sync has a specially molded bottom to rest at an efficient angle. Each Sync bag also has ten forward-facing pockets for easy access. And, at just over six pounds, this bag is lighter than just about any other cart bag on the market.

Lofty Expectations: High and Soft

Students in our Dave Pelz Scoring Game Schools ask all the time how to hit high, soft shots. The easiest solution is to put a lob wedge in your bag and practice using it, so you're ready for situations that call for the ball to travel high and land soft.

Take this common scenario, for example: Your ball sits 40 yards from the pin and you have to carry a bunker with only a few yards of green to work with. You need the right tool for the job—a lob wedge—to hit the ball high to carry the trouble while still landing it softly enough to stop near the hole.

It's a myth that lob wedges are only for good players. Truth is, anyone who wants to score better and routinely faces shots over obstacles to tight pins needs a lob wedge. In today's game, green complexes are more demanding, and we see so many fast, sloping greens, it's important to be able to stop your shots near the hole. Think of it this way: the more greens you miss, the more you need a lob wedge.

What is important to understand about hitting a lob wedge is that you must not decelerate during the downswing. This causes your hands to lag behind the club-head at impact. If your hands are even or ahead of the ball at impact, you'll find that high, soft shots are easier to hit with the lob wedge than with any other club.

The technique for the basic 40-yard lob wedge shot is pretty simple. Start with the ball in the middle of your stance and take a three-quarter-length backswing (with your arms pointing in the "nine o'clock" position). If you play right-handed, let your left hand lead the club to the ball and accelerate through the impact zone as you shift forward to a full finish with your weight on your front leg. There's no need to open the clubface until you're comfortable playing a variety of shots with the lob wedge. The loft of the club will do the work for you. It's easier to hit the ball solidly and straight with a square clubface.

Many golfers are putting a 64-degree wedge in the bag to combat the severe hazards, slopes, speeds, and elevations found on today's modern golf course designs. The only real "trick" to hitting these clubs is starting with a square club face and accelerating through the shot to a full finish. Knowing when to use these clubs is also important. Next time you need a quick, soft landing, reach for a more lofted wedge and swing with a square clubface instead of opening the face of a less-lofted wedge. See which method is easier and yields the best results. I think you'll soon be a convert to the lofted and extra-lofted wedges designed to give golfers extra weapons around the greens.

Magic is Not Obvious

Pete Dye's Whistling Straits Course

Golf course architects come in many shapes and sizes, from different places and with different perspectives. Golf course architecture should be a reflection of the wonderful variety this game provides. The game of golf is played on distinct and unique playing fields, and architectural variety is what makes the game so grand.

This is nothing new. Golden age architects Bell, Tillinghast, Ross, and McKenzie each had a unique style and offered varying perspective. But their success was based upon some simple ideas about golf and golfers.

Architectural perspectives still come in different shapes and sizes. I have the greatest admiration for Pete Dye. He has created some of the most extraordinary golf courses of the modern era. His “dye-abolical” efforts have been examined, dissected, and detailed. The professional player is harassed and the average golfer besieged.

Some of his more distinctive designs were those that offered an extraordinary level of intimidation. From all angles, there was much to observe, much to understand, and a lot to digest. Beautiful and engaging, courses like TPC Sawgrass, Whistling Straits, and PGA

West are oddly harmonious, while simultaneously menacing—bombarding every golfer with continued dread.

Interestingly, all types of golfers have had great rounds on these golf courses. Just the other day, a professional posted a 64 at TPC Sawgrass, even with a double bogey. He played as if wearing blinders, never seeing the trouble or allowing that trouble to affect his play. When I played there, I began my round with a series of pars, a bogey, and a birdie. I was at even par after eight holes. On the ninth hole, I made a mistake. After that blunder, I was a terrified golfer—overwhelmed for the next ten holes.

Dye's designs are equal parts strategy, heroism, and pressure. Play the right shot to the right spot and you can play well: do not let the massive bunkers, steep grades, or insidious hazards affect your play. Play the wrong shot, or play to the wrong spot, and you will be penalized. Simple, right? But once you make a mistake, the blinders are off. You will see everything and it will interfere with clear thinking. Only the most talented, thoughtful golfers can recover. This is the genius of Pete Dye.

I am an admirer of Pete Dye, but my design philosophies come from the opposite direction. My instincts as an architect are to allow the golfer to ‘play away’ with little care, and a wide berth, but generate subtleties and surprises that offer enticing challenges and goading the golfer to get careless. Each shot is presented with challenges, some easier than others, and each providing subtle demands requiring attention, or even recovery.

These same philosophies are inherent in the designs of Perry Maxwell. He managed to create some wonderful golf courses that adhere to strategic principles while providing a simply beautiful challenge. It is both fair and tough. The Maxwell Rolls are the most notable aspect of his courses. The greens are filled with pitches and curves, rolls, and ridges. Yet, even with these heavily contoured greens there is subtlety and nuance to his designs; there is charm and timelessness that is revealed slowly and evenly. The course grows as a friendship, with characteristics that are at the same time polite and puzzling. There is a magic to these golf courses. The challenges are not obvious, but they certainly exist. That magic is charming.

Every golfer should expect to read a golf course...to take the clues from the architect and determine how the hole should be played. Pete Dye offers lots of clues and overwhelms the senses. Perry Maxwell provides few clues, but with equally destructive results.

Like magic, good golf course architecture does not have to be obvious. It can be obvious and menacing, or it can be subtle, simple, and simultaneously captivating.

TETON TITAN RISING

SHOOTING STAR GOLF CLUB IN JACKSON HOLE, WYOMING

By Greg Jourdan
and
Neal Kotlarek

Hole 16

Hole 18

Mention Jackson Hole to a roomful of skiers and their eyes will glisten while their mouths go dry. Indeed, this resort at the base of the Teton Mountains is considered by many to be the gold standard in ski properties across the United States. But when the snow melts and the ski lifts shut down for the season, it's generally assumed that this resort community is left with nothing better to do than plan for the next winter. Then came a Shooting Star...

“For my part I know nothing with any certainty, but the sight of the stars makes me dream.” Vincent van Gogh

The Snake River Valley in Wyoming has a storied history on the western frontier. Fur trappers and hunters dipped between the ranges of what is now Grand Teton National Park to pluck the finest furs. Locals credit “Davey” Jackson, an 1820s fur trapper, as Jackson Hole’s namesake. With the advent of the Model T, easterners motored into the western mountains, and Jackson Hole began to attract the elite of American society. In fact, it was John D. Rockefeller Jr., who spearheaded the preservation of the national park as he purchased and preserved thousands of acres of breathtaking forested land. In 1929, Stanley Rogers Resor, president of J. Walter Thompson Company – one of the nations most successful advertising and marketing agencies – began purchasing his own Snake River Valley acreage when his son shared his experiences following a summer vacation with friends. By the 1930s, the Resor family relocated to Jackson Hole and began a highly successful cattle business, eventually becoming the second largest landowner in the region after the Rockefellers. Well into the 20th century, this area on the southern edge of Grand Teton National Park was a honey hole of beaver, elk, and other big game.

Today, Jackson Hole tops the state’s cost of living charts yet, unlike Yellowstone and the Grand Canyon, the community remains as true to its western roots as a modern destination can hope to be. While the Rockefellers ushered in the elite of the early 20th century, the Resor family is welcoming a new generation of success stories at their private, ultra-exclusive Shooting Star Golf Club, an arm of the family-owned Snake River Ranch.

About ten years ago, the Resor family elected to initiate a real estate development to complement their cattle ranch, which is currently the largest in Jackson Hole. With over 1,300 acres of open space, Rogers Resor’s grandson, John, put a plan into action to hire golf course architect Tom Fazio, a man renowned for creating sublime courses around the world. “Tom is the perfect guy because he realized right away that what we wanted to do was a little different than your typical golf course,” Resor shares. “We didn’t want to see homes from the course, so when you play this course, only three holes yield a glimpse of golf cabins and a few single family homes.”

At Resor’s request, each hole was to be one of 18 chapters that provide an isolated golfing experience. While Fazio had free reign, Resor did have a few parameters, and he is pleased with the results. “Each hole has its own separate environment, and you can’t see golfers on adjoining holes because there are embankments that create that special environment.” The course is surrounded by mountain ranges. And unlike other courses in the area, Shooting Star rests at the near foothills.

Fazio’s efforts went beyond plotting golf holes on a topographical map. “We moved over two million cubic yards of dirt to create a special environment,” Resor explains. “The golf course looks like it has been here for 30 years because we planted mature trees.” Details that ensured Shooting Star’s authentic-looking terrain were essential to Resor’s vision for the family-owned and family-managed club. “Tom studied the streams that were just north of here, and he recreated those streams so they looked like true mountain streams running through the golf course,” shared Resor.

The finished product has already earned Shooting Star a top-25 ranking on Golf Week’s annual Best Modern Golf Courses. Unlike many courses in Jackson Hole, Shooting Star provides elevation changes within the course. “Tom wanted to create a lot of dramatic change in elevation because the mountains are so big, and they come out of the ground so quickly that the scale of the golf course had to fit the mountains,” commented Resor.

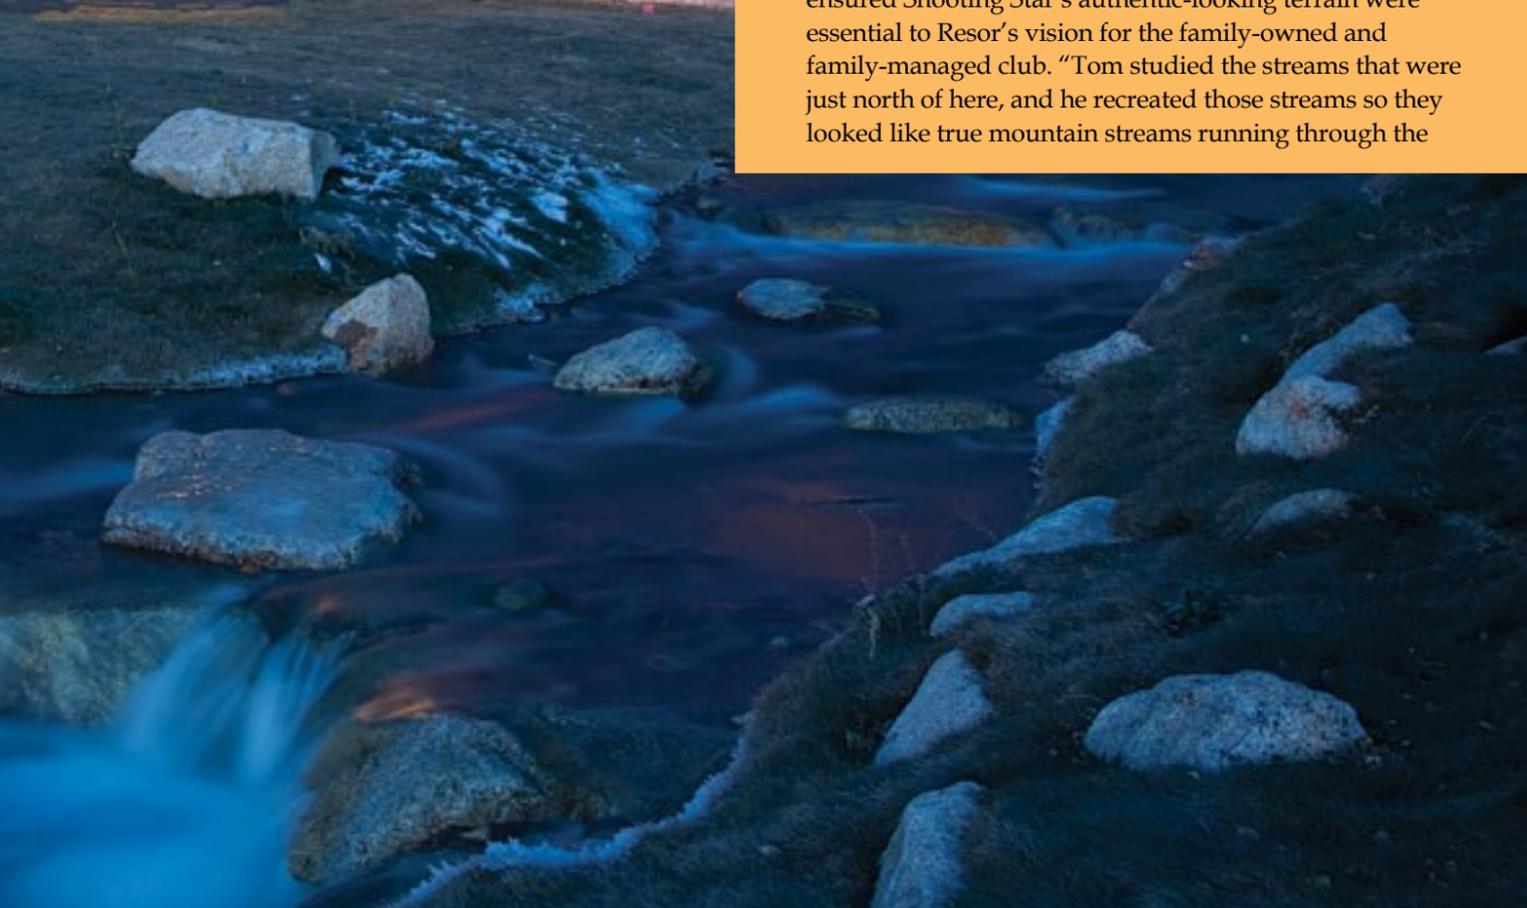

Fazio calls the property for Shooting Star “one of a kind.” Anyone doubting those words needs only stand on the 1st tee and look around in each direction to feel reassured. The 392-yard No. 1 may be a modest hole in length and design, but each step from tee to green brings one closer to the mountain range and provides grand views.

While an imposing course length-wise at 7,500 yards, the layout actually plays far shorter due to the thin air. Jackson Hole resides 6,200 feet above sea level, thus allowing the ball to soar in a way it doesn’t in Chicago, which is only 735 feet above sea level. The extra distance gained is just the beginning of enhancing experiences at Shooting Star.

It is fair to say that the success of one’s front nine rides on how well one negotiates the two heroic par 3s. No. 2 is 199 yards from the back tees and plays slightly longer due to a large bunker that protects the entire right side of the putting surface. Fortunately, the left side of the green is unprotected, thus providing a bailout area off the tee.

The 256-yard No. 6 introduces the player to both Hogback Mountain, that rises proudly behind the green and Fish Creek, which meanders ominously across the front side of the putting surface. As he did on No. 2, Fazio offers a bail out area to allow errant tee shots to avoid the hazard. But if the flagstick on this par 3 is on the left side of the monstrous green, a shot short and to the right will require a half-wedge approach to reach the flagstick.

The front nine finishes in grand fashion as No. 9 is downwind and plays into the Teton Mountains. A lake supports the entire left side of the fairway. Eyebrowed yawning bunkers guard the right side. The rough to the right of the fairway is mounded to kick back errant shots. The green of this par 5 is elevated and well protected. Regardless, the hole offers birdie possibilities as a good tee shot and a decent second shot should leave only a wedge shot final approach to the flagstick.

The best two holes on the back nine are Nos. 11 and 15. Bunkers are strategically located to pinch the landing zone of the 548-yard par-5 11th hole. Steer your ball down the left side of the hole so as to attack this green from a good angle on your final approach. The green is narrow and will feed toward the creek.

No. 15 is a long sweeping par-5 cape hole that is guarded down the left with a 20-acre lake. Plenty of room to the right side of the fairway, but the closer you play to the lake, the shorter you make the hole. Don't be too bold on the second shot as the hole stretches 644 yards from the championship tees and is a three-shooter regardless of elevation juice. Patience is rewarded with par.

Any golf course resting at the foothills of a mountain range is special. A golf course designed by one of the game's master architects placed on the foothills of one of America's most dramatic landscapes makes Shooting Star Golf Club extraordinary.

Chicago Highlands Golf Club Continues To Soar Above Chicago

Chicagoland golfers who have driven past the Cermak Road exit of I-294 west of the city can't help but notice that another phase of Westchester's Chicago Highlands Club is getting closer to completion. Huge berms that tower above the course and the interstate are being shaped into position for seeding, shared Tom Healy, one of the club's founders. "The membership is really excited about how things are shaping up entering the new season," Healy reported. "The golf course made it through the winter in excellent shape and the mild winter allowed us to move forward on a number of projects."

Touted as the first family country club to be built in Chicago's western suburbs in over 80 years, the 270-acre complex features an acclaimed 7,528-yard course designed by Arthur Hills. Along with a huge double-ended grass practice range, club amenities include three practice holes and a swimming pool complex completed last summer. Future plans include a spa and fitness facilities, tennis and paddle tennis courts, an outdoor ice skating rink, and an expansive clubhouse complete with bowling alleys.

Chicago Highlands is a private, invitation-only family club. For membership information, visit the club's website at www.chicagohighlands.com.

His 1-under-par total score of 287 earned him $7,295 and placed him in the top 1,500 in Official World Rankings.

Fans of the Golf Channel's Big Break Ireland TV series will recall that Murphy was the event's 2011 champion after defeating Canadian Julien Trudeau in a playoff. Along with $50,000 cash and other prizes, the Kerry native received an exemption to the Morocco tournament. He was the first Big Break winner to make the cut after receiving an exemption. His second exemption will be for the Irish Open, June 28 – July 1 at Royal Portrush.

2012 Chicago Golf Show Shatters Records

A record 16,700 people attended the Chicago Golf Show at the Stephens Convention Center in Rosemont the weekend of February 24 - 26. In addition to the record number of attendees, a record 187 companies bought a record number of exhibit booths, with booth sales increasing 25 percent over 2011.

"Golfers have come to realize that if they attend the Chicago Golf Show, they will be enjoying the most complete golf show around," show owner Tom Corcoran said. "With our speakers, wholesalers, golf courses, travel destinations, new products, free golf, free lessons from Illinois PGA pros, and long drive and putting contests, there is something for everyone."

Corcoran, who has been running the three-day consumer show since 1997, attributes the show's success to their free golf promotion, increased golf wholesalers, celebrity appearances, and a comprehensive marketing campaign across multiple platforms.

The Chicago Golf Show is the nation's oldest consumer golf show and one of the largest. The show typically attracts 12,000-15,000 visitors each year. Follow the Chicago Golf Show on social media at <http://www.facebook.com/ChicagoGolfShow> and <https://twitter.com/chicagogolfshow>.

Start the Season, and Your Swing, the Right Way

Another season is upon us, and for Chicago golf that means one of two things: either you get to start your game over, or you get to take all those tips you pieced together from the winter magazines and “experiment” at the range. If you want this season to be great, then it starts with the proper setup.

One of the first questions we ask our students at the Rabito Academy at Bolingbrook Golf Club is, “Where do you bend from?” It’s surprisingly rare to hear a correct answer the first time. “I bend from my waist,” “I bend from my lower back,” “I bend over from my knees.” We set up to provide both balance and range of motion. To get both of these, we bend from the hip joints.

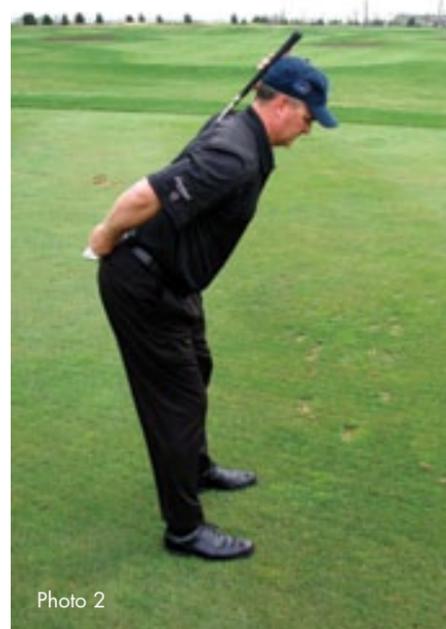

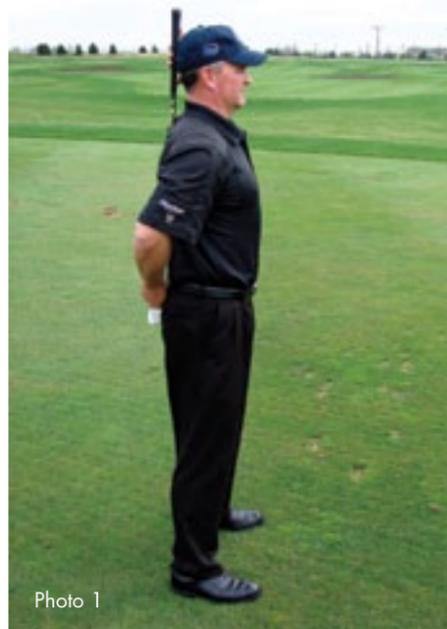

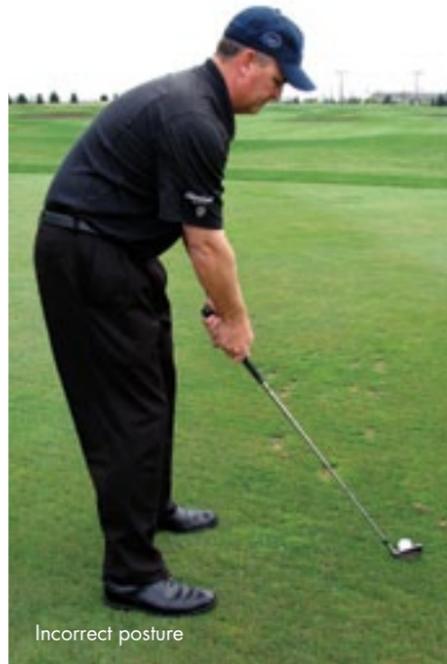

Let’s start with your stance. Set your feet with your heels hip-width apart and your toes flared out slightly. Your legs—ankles, knees, and hips—are now vertically aligned to let your hips find their range of motion, which we’ll discuss in future articles.

One solid way to make sure you’re bending from your hip joints is to place a club behind your back until it is touching your head and tailbone [photo 1]. Bend from your hip joints. If you bend forward properly, then the club will keep the same contact with your head and tailbone as when you were standing upright [photo 2]. When you address a ball, another thing you will notice is that your beltline is now on the same angle as your club shaft. (Observe a player with a hunched appearance sometime, and you’ll notice how his belt remains fairly parallel to the ground.)

A true bend, or hinging, from the hip joints allows the proper movement of your spine and hips in the swing, giving you access to your full range of motion. This hip-joint hinge applies to every setup in golf—full swing, short game, and putting.

Now that you have correct posture in your setup, your arms will hang vertically from your shoulders. This is where you will grip every club, and the length of the club will dictate how far you stand from the ball.

Come out and visit the Rabito Golf Academy at Bolingbrook. We offer private, semi-private, and clinic instruction for all ages to help you get your game on track!

Major News From Benton Harbor

73rd Senior PGA Championship at The Golf Club at Harbor Shores

By Greg Jourdan and Neal Kotlarek

In just under eight weeks, Michigan will host her first Senior PGA Championship May 24 – 27. During those five days, professional golf's world stage will be located on a parcel of land that only four years ago was an industrial wasteland. The 73rd Senior PGA Championship presented by KitchenAid will be played at the spectacularly dramatic Golf Club at Harbor Shores. To grasp the turnaround that Benton Harbor has experienced to its fullest extent, every player, gallery member, and TV viewer should know at least some of the backstory as to how all of this happened.

Rewind to the 1970s. Benton Harbor's once stable industrial backbone began a mass exodus and with it went jobs that had been passed on from one generation of worker to another. By the 1980s, the community's spine was but a memory and residents began a 20-year crawl back to sustainability. The revitalization effort was spearheaded by The Harbor Shores Development, a non-profit initiative with a goal of establishing roots that could awaken the community and improve its infrastructure while at the same time creating opportunities for new business and residents. A co-op of organizations, businesses, and the local government pumped a $60 million investment into Benton Harbor. This year's 73rd and 2014's 75th Senior PGA Championship may be the events that spark interest in other ventures to establish the community as a destination.

The Players

The field for the 73rd Senior PGA will be a celebration of golf greats, including 2011 champion Tom Watson, and former Masters champions

Fred Couples and Bernhard Langer. Tournament attendees can also expect to see other former stars of the PGA Tour, as well as three players with Illinois roots—Chip Beck, Jeff Sluman, and Marion, Illinois, professional Mark Faulkner.

As Chicagoans know first hand, the combatants for the championship trophy should expect to battle any number of weather conditions. Surely, five-time British Open champion Tom Watson would love to see Mother Nature toss a few curve balls at the field. "I'm hoping," he said in a press conference announcing the event, "that we'll have good weather there—meaning that it's going to blow about 25 miles an hour and be about 55 degrees—which is Watson weather," he said with a smile. Just 90 minutes from Chicago, next month's major in Benton Harbor is a tournament every golf fan should attend to witness both the players' skills as well as the renaissance of Benton Harbor.

The Course

While tradition has been the bedrock for major championship golf, the Jack

Harbor Shores Hole 15

Hawkshead GC

Nicklaus-signature course at Harbor Shores is a testament to a new vision by the PGA of America. "I think it is great that the PGA recognizes that there are some great old golf courses, but there are also some really good new golf courses," Nicklaus commented. With the national spotlight approaching in May, Harbor Shores will springboard from a community's revitalization project to a major golf venue. Nicklaus added, "It is hard for me to believe that new golf courses are not equally as good, or better, than old golf courses."

Where to Eat
The ripple effect of the Harbor Shores development initiative has created an arts district along Territorial Road and Main Street. The newly revamped Library Pub and Eatery [190 Territorial Road] is just a pitch and a putt from the course and provides an upscale tavern menu. A meal here also provides visitors a chance to stroll the galleries of a budding art community and the birth of a new era in Benton Harbor. If you like to eat where the locals dine, then Benton

Harbor's North Shore Inn [107 Higman Park Road] is the spot for the best burgers. From the street, you may think the building is abandoned, and truthfully, the interior is not much better. However, North Shore, located just across the street from the back nine of the club, serves one of the most delicious burgers you'll ever experience. On the opposite end of the ambiance spectrum, The Boulevard Inn's The Bistro on the Boulevard [521 Lake Boulevard] in downtown St. Joseph is an elegant experience with exquisite French cuisine. You'll need to change out of your shorts and golf shirt, but after a day of hiking in the gallery a great piece of beef is worth the wardrobe change.

Where to Play
Golfers planning on spending more than a day watching the Senior PGA Championship in person are encouraged to extend their visit even longer by taking in one or more of the outstanding golf courses across southwestern Michigan and not far from Benton Harbor. Hawkshead Golf Club in South Haven [www.hawksheadlinks.com] ranks among the proudest achievements of Arthur Hills' career due in part to the natural flow of the sand dunes upon which the course was built. At 6,984 yards, the course provides plenty of challenge to go with the sweeping landscapes. Hills left untouched huge sand waste areas across much of the course, some of which must be traversed with heroic carries to the green. The 396-yard, tenth hole might not be the property's signature hole, but it may be the most interesting one. A precise tee shot sets up a mid-iron approach on this dogleg left par 4. A large waste area, which cuts across the fairway, must be traversed to reach the green. Hawkshead also has lodging and a fantastic restaurant on site! A pair of sister courses are the marquee golf attractions in the Saugatuck/Douglas area. Perennially ranked among the top 25 courses in Michigan, Ravines Golf Course [www.ravinesgolfclub.com] was designed by Arnold Palmer and features, of course, several wide ravines that cross holes. Scenic and impeccably maintained, the layout has wide fairways and generous landing areas to thus allow errant hitters plenty of room for mistakes. A huge renovation project has vastly improved the look and playability of the 6,531-yard Clearbrook Golf Club [www.clearbrookgolfclub.com] that opened in 1926. Mature trees grace this elegant course that offers extremely affordable green fees.

The 73rd Senior PGA Championship will not be the test to see if Benton Harbor is major-ready; this championship is the reward for a community that rolled the dice and beat the odds. Single day tickets to the 73rd Senior PGA Championship are $50 for single day passes, and a week pass is $150. ### Baresel Joins Acclaimed Cantigny Golf Academy

The renowned Cantigny Golf Academy in Wheaton continues to diversify and expand. Greg Baresel, 27, joined the staff in March and was immediately named as lead instructor of the PGA Tour Academy Junior Camps at the complex. The academy is headed by Director of Instruction Connie DeMattia, and also maintains a golf fitness expert, a master clubfitter, and a sports/golf psychologist.

"Greg is a great addition to our professional team at the Academy," says DeMattia. "His knowledge of the golf swing and manner of communication are outstanding."

Baresel, known for his individualized instruction for beginners and experienced golfers alike, has a knack for motivating his students and for making a demanding game seem less complicated. "The key to consistency is having the body produce the most efficient swing that it can," said Baresel. "But every player has a unique range of motion, and there is no perfect way to swing a golf club. I try to maximize a player's ability to achieve their best performance on the golf course."

Toss it Toward the Cup

Great short games require great imaginations. To execute any shot, you must imagine it first. We ask our students to imagine three things: trajectory, landing target, and roll out to the hole. Begin any shot around the green by walking up to the green and surveying the landing area. Once you pick your landing spot, pace it off back to the ball. If you are carrying the ball between 5 and 25 paces, it is a toss shot.

The basic mechanics of the toss shot are crucial. A player must set up to the ball in a good posture (tilted forward from the hips) and standing to the handle with a narrow stance [photo 1].

Once a player is in a good set up position, the toss shot is performed just like it sounds, tossing the ball sideways underneath the body and toward the target. The arms need to swing straight back and forth toward the target. The player's weight needs to remain stationary (single pivot point) in the backswing [photo 2]. In the downswing, the club head, hands, and body's center need to match up at impact so that they form a straight line. At the finish, the player should have pivoted around the forward leg. One of the primary mistakes players make is to fall back onto the back leg in an effort to "scoop" the ball up onto the green. It is imperative in order to strike the ball on a descending approach that the player swings the club head down to the ball while pivoting over the left leg.

After you understand the basic motion of the toss shot, you can learn to control the trajectory. First, choose the right club. Every player should carry a sand wedge (54° to 56°) and a lob wedge (58° to 60°). For a high toss, use the lob wedge. For low toss, use a sand wedge. Next, set the shaft in relation to the target. For the high toss set the shaft perpendicular to the ground (neutral). For the low toss set the shaft toward the target.

Once the shaft is set, "stand to the handle", which means the handle of the club should point at the center of your body with your spine perpendicular to the ground. The most common cause of skulled or fat shots is tilting back in the set up or in the swing.

When you are set up properly to hit a high or a low toss, the next key is in the takeaway. For a high toss, the clubface should be rotated open (toe up) and the club head should be kept outside of the hands as it swings back. For a low toss the club head should be kept slightly closed (facing the ball) and swung lower and more to the inside.

As soon as you have learned the proper set up and motion of the toss shot, you will be able to control your trajectory around the green giving you the best opportunity to get closer to the hole and convert your ups and downs.

TGA Positioned to Grow the Game in Chicago

TGA Premier Junior Golf, an innovative youth sports franchise firm that grows golf and makes it accessible through a unique school-based teaching curriculum, is positioning itself to expand in the Chicago area. The area's first successful franchise launched in 2010 in nearby McHenry County and more are in development to open in the near future.

TGA is making a significant impact on growing the game of golf nationwide through its five-level after-school enrichment classes. They are offered in 23 states for 165,000 kindergarten through 8th grade students in 2,500 schools.

Statistics show that youth that are engaged in afterschool activities perform better in the classroom, become more acclimated in society, and have a greater chance to succeed in life. Each session runs five to ten weeks, depending on the school's time frame, and students use the almostGOLF™ ball, so they can see the trajectory of a "real" ball but also stay safe.

What sets TGA apart from other traditional junior golf programs is the unique teaching curriculum developed by PhDs in Child and Curriculum Development, along with PGA and LPGA golf professionals that incorporate math, English, science, and history with a character development initiative. The programs are also adaptable to any sized space and are conducted anywhere on school campuses, including fields, gymnasiums, multi-purpose rooms, cafeterias, parking lots, hallways, and classrooms.

Founder and CEO Joshua Jacobs, a graduate of Emory University where he was a member of the golf team, started TGA as an overnight golf camp for kids that morphed into the concept of introducing children of all backgrounds to the game through schools.

"I have always believed that the best way to grow the game of golf was to bring it directly to the schools and provide a consistent and accessible program for the future of golf, which is what we have created at TGA."

Jacobs launched the first golf enrichment programs at six Los Angeles schools in the fall of 2003. TGA's focus on providing children with an opportunity to learn golf through a full service program that is fun and cost-effective received an overwhelmingly positive response from schools, parents, and students.

As word spread about TGA's program, more and more inquiries from people around the country expressed their interest in the organization. In 2007, after four years of growing, honing, and improving the program locally, TGA began offering geographically exclusive franchises.

TGA decided to franchise their unique business model because of the lack of business ownership opportunities within the golf industry for entrepreneurs and golf professionals. TGA provides a full-service program and business solution for anybody with a passion for golf, kids, and their community. As a result, the franchise business has become an award-winning, low-cost franchise business opportunity for self-starters.

Sherman Leland, a multiple TGA franchise owner in the San Francisco area and a veteran franchise business owner, believes TGA has developed an excellent, affordable business ownership opportunity.

"I have been a multiple franchise owner with TGA for three years and in the franchise business for over 5 years. The positive growth from the early stages of TGA is only due to the great programs that each franchise runs and the dedication of the founders to really go beyond their own capabilities to build a wonderful company," Leland said. "The business model is very successful, even during these tough economic times."

Entrepreneur Magazine selected the fast-growing youth sports company in 2010 among its "Top 10 Best Franchise Deals" based on total startup costs. The company is also known for being one of the nation's top children's health and fitness franchises.

PGA professionals, entrepreneurs, and even golf course owners looking to grow their future business would be smart to consider a TGA franchise. This one-of-a-kind model has become a successful initiative that is changing the landscape of how sports industries such as golf can increase growth and participation while positively impacting kids and engaging families in their communities.

This includes the PGA of America, who recently appointed Jacobs to be a key member of Golf 2.0's strategic initiative team. The PGA Sections in the nine target markets of Golf 2.0 are working with TGA to responsibly grow golf; one of the nine markets is the Chicago area.

TGA is making golf affordable and accessible to the masses directly through physical education and afterschool enrichment programs at elementary and middle schools, childcare centers, and community-based organizations. The organization is also dedicated to transitioning students to over 200 golf course partners nationwide through camps, clinics, and private lessons.

Local PGA professional Shawn Chisamore, a native of Illinois and franchise owner in McHenry and Walworth counties near Chicago, is excited to combine his 15-year PGA background teaching the game and working with youth.

"As a PGA member, it is our mission to grow the game of golf and it must start with the youth of today. TGA Premier Junior Golf provides the perfect opportunity for PGA professionals and business people to operate their own business, while teaching kids the game and the life lessons associated with it, as well as making the game more prosperous for the future."

Steve Tanner, COO of TGA Premier Junior Golf who oversees franchise development across the country, sees Chicago as a fast-growing market for the TGA model.

"Given Chicago's large golfing community, TGA's success in other cold-climate areas, and my experience as a native Chicagoan, we view the greater Chicago area as a fantastic market for TGA. There are likely six to ten viable territories in the region that we're actively seeking to develop with local entrepreneurs who are passionate about enriching kids' lives through our sustainable business models."

TGA's Midwest territories currently include McHenry and Walworth counties near Chicago, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Cleveland, Akron, Ann Arbor, and Detroit.

NIU Golf: A Family Affair

Some might wonder what would compel a golfer to pursue college golf in a cold-weather climate when her sport is definitely a warm weather activity. For most of the women of the Northern Illinois University's golf team, the reason is pretty simple—they wanted to play for a team that was close to home. For others, it has become a family tradition.

The entire team is comprised of ladies from Illinois or Wisconsin, so being closer to home factored into the decision-making process. Current freshman Taylor Ellett's mom, Sue Sisler, played on head coach Pam Tyska's very first team 26 years ago. This has even deeper meaning now as Tyska has announced she is leaving NIU this spring to pursue other opportunities in the golf industry. It's a fitting end that Tyska will spend her last season at NIU coaching the daughter of a player from her first year with the Huskies.

For freshman Casey LaBarbera of Marinette, Wisconsin, opting to play at NIU is a family affair. LaBarbera was born in DeKalb, both of her parents played golf at NIU, and one of her current teammates is cousin Allie Parthie. Parthie, a junior, states "my aunt, Casey's Mom, was my high school golf coach and she had played golf at NIU so she recommended I check it out on one of my recruiting trips. We stopped here and from the very beginning it just felt right." LaBarbera adds, "I felt like I'd really fit in here and I just clicked with everyone. It's been that way since I arrived on campus as a freshman."

Senior Kelsie Passolt was recruited to play for a college in South Carolina. Passolt shares, "I visited the school in South Carolina and the facilities were amazing and everything looked good on paper. When I came to NIU, I just knew right away that this was the team I wanted to compete with and I've enjoyed every year here. All in all, it's been an amazing experience at NIU, very rewarding both in golf and academics."

Freshman Taylor Ellett of Hampshire, Illinois, chose NIU partially because it is close to home and because of the strong family ties she has with the university. Her mother and grandparents attended NIU and they passed along good feelings about the school and the golf program.

Senior Carissa Burdi stated, "On my recruiting trip, Coach Tyska took us around and I knew right away that this was the place for me. During my years at NIU, I've made such great friendships and met so many new people that I wouldn't have met if I weren't in sports. My decision to come here was absolutely the right choice. I don't feel like I've missed out on anything at all by playing golf for a cold-weather school."

Senior Katie Kuhn from Clarendon Hills, Illinois, spent her freshman year at a school in Florida and said "being down there is great because obviously you can play golf all year, but it just wasn't what I was looking for. My Dad is a Northern alum and has good memories of his time here. And even though we play a warm-weather sport, we make it work, and we're all used to it because we grew up here. It's also been great representing Hinsdale Central High School which is Coach Tyska's alma mater, and I believe I'm the first alumna of coach's high school to make the team here at NIU!"

For the entire team, opting to play golf in a cold-weather state had little impact on their decision on where to play their college golf. Some are continuing the family tradition, others like being close to home, and some based their decision on being able to play for the heart and soul of NIU Women's Golf for the past 26 years, Coach Pam Tyska. Playing in the cold just doesn't seem to matter when you have a warm feeling inside.

On The Corkscrews

Leo McNeal

A Landmark Opinion

Since its founding in 1974 by Damaris Deere Ford, great-great granddaughter of John Deere, Landmark Vineyards has called Sonoma County home. Originally located in Windsor, California, in 1989 Landmark moved to the heart of Sonoma valley to escape the encroaching urbanization to the north.

In 1991, Landmark decided to focus primarily on Chardonnay. This effort was reinforced in 1993 when they retained the highly-regarded winemaker and consulting enologist Helen Turley, who has also worked for wineries such as Pahlmeyer, Bryant Family Vineyard, Colgin, and Blankiet. Turley is credited for being one of the first people in the early 1990s to see Sonoma's potential for world-class wines, particularly Chardonnay. The work came together nicely in 1997, when Landmark's 1995 Overlook Chardonnay landed a spot on the Wine Spectator's Top 100 List, the first of seven such appearances.

Landmark sources its Chardonnay fruit from a variety of growers in Sonoma valley, allowing them to take advantage of a dozen microclimates and growing conditions. Landmark also maintains a modest 11-acre organically-farmed estate vineyard, planted to traditional Chateaufeuf du Pape varietals—Grenache, Syrah, Mourvedre, Cunoise, and Viognier.

2010 Overlook Chardonnay $25
After harvest and pressing, the juice for this wine is racked into French oak barrels. There, indigenous yeasts carry out the primary fermentation. This traditional practice allows a medley of yeast species to each contribute its own unique flavor components to the wine. Next comes a second malo-lactic fermentation. The wine then spends eight to ten months in barrel sur lees, after which it is finally blended.

In the glass, this wine is a pale gold tinged with green. The nose offers aromas of grapefruit and preserved lemon. The citrus theme continues on the palate, abetted by good acidity and just enough oak to temper and mellow the flavors.

Serve this up with Chicken Breasts with Artichokes and Mustard Sauce, or Sea Bass with Gingered Broth.

2010 Grand Detour Pinot Noir $40
This Pinot Noir shows that Landmark has a way with reds as well as whites. Grand Detour is sourced from five vineyards in the cool-climate Sonoma Coast appellation. The climate of this region allows the wine to mature at a leisurely pace to improve structure and develop tannins.

This wine is medium brick in color, with a nose of wild strawberries and plums. The taste follows through with plum and other stone fruits. There is plenty of body (especially for a pinot noir) supported by tart tannins.

Salmon en Papillote would be a classic pairing with this wine. Also consider Veal Scallopine with Lemon and Capers or Roasted Pork Loin with Apricot-Armagnac Compote.

Can the Giant Killer Take a Major Step?

At 5-feet, 8-inches and 145 pounds, Mark Wilson doesn't fit the look of golf anymore.

For that modern era power physique, we start with Tiger Woods, then move to Rory McIlroy, Camilo Villegas, and Dustin Johnson.

The game is trending younger, stronger, and longer. The 37-year-old Elmhurst resident knows he's not any of that.

Yet in the last 16 months Wilson has three wins on the PGA Tour and four other top-10 finishes, a stretch of play that easily exceeds that of not only Woods and Villegas, but Sergio Garcia and Paul Casey. The win total trumps Johnson, Brandt Snedeker, and Nick Watney.

After a third-place finish in the WGC-Accenture Match Play Championship, in which he was dubbed the "giant killer" for knocking off low seeds Lee Westwood, Bo Van Pelt, and Johnson, Wilson rose to No. 25 in the world and sixth on the United States Ryder Cup points list. It's a stat line that paints him as one of the best golfers on the planet.

As we head into the first major of the season in Augusta however, it's hard to place him among the favorites. Believe it or not, he's only going to be making his seventh career start in a major championship, and as recently as 2010 he didn't play in any majors.

And yet, here he is. "I just keep plugging along and see what I can do," Wilson said prior to his defense of his Waste Management Open title in February. "I feel good about things. I'm not trying to reinvent the wheel every week like I was when I was 30 years old. There was always a new swing thought, a new putting thought, a new chipping thought. Let's go try that this week and see how it works. I don't do that anymore, I just do the same things over and over again."

Maybe that's why Wilson may be a major factor this year and become a Ryder Cup hero at Medinah Country Club.

His first full year on tour was 2003, and he often found himself grinding away for perfection on the range at Cog Hill. In an imperfect game, such pursuit can be debilitating—especially when you add the pressure of keeping your card.

"I've got a better perspective than I did back maybe in the beginning of my professional career," he said at the Match Play. "I think maybe I'm a little more comfortable because actually I am financially a little more comfortable than I was back when I was just starting out, and you really just are playing for rent money and all that kind of stuff. I can now focus more on victories and making Ryder Cup teams and stuff like that, not worrying about paying the rent."

During this incredible stretch of play, Wilson has often credited his faith, family, and his work with mental game guru Bob Rotella in helping him get to the level of a multiple PGA Tour winner.

There is always another level in this game, so when you start piling up victories and climb the world rankings, focus turns to golf's only true measuring sticks: the majors.

"The majors this year should be a little bit different," he said at the Waste Management Open. "I mean, the Masters already, last year we had everybody in my family coming, and now I think my dad is the only one coming this year, and so that just makes it easier in that sense, too. And I've realized that, once again, it's just golf, and it's hyped because yeah, those are the ones that everyone remembers...But at the same time I just have to treat them like another golf tournament."

One course Wilson should get to learn quickly however is one you would think he would know: Medinah. He admitted in early March he's never played No. 3, though he has been on the grounds as a spectator. Wilson cherishes his off time and says if he does play when he's at home—a big if—it's at Cog Hill or Butler National. With the Ryder Cup quickly approaching—and his chances for making Davis Love III's team increasing—he's hoping to get over to the historic club, even if it might take some convincing. "I'm sure they'd let me on if I called," he said. "I don't know if they've heard of me, though, either. No one's heard of me. When I call up I can't just say my name like I'm sure Phil and Tiger can, I add on I'm Mark Wilson, a PGA player. Maybe they'll be looking me up on the computer when I'm on the phone to see if it's legit."

That's the question heading into this year's major season: is he legit? He's a good guy, a very good player, and we root for him, but what is he? Is he a top-25 player? Is he a Ryder Cupper? Can he break the threshold from PGA Tour winner into major championship contender?

We'll find out if Wilson can join the elite ranks, beginning at Augusta.

I don't know if they've heard of me, though, either. No one's heard of me. When I call up I can't just say my name like I'm sure Phil and Tiger can.
